

THE APOCRYPHAL MYSTERY TOUR

Tonight's Hymn

Gethsemane (Eagle Mountain Ward Youth Activates Version)

Flood Mechanics

- Our church holds that the garden of Eden was in Jackson County, meaning that the ark would have to drift from there, all the way to Turkey in 375 days with no propulsion.
- While nonmembers refute this with the fact we found all 4 rivers that watered the garden in Mesopotamia, our model still works because the ark could have made that trip at a speed of 0.7 miles per hour, and the max speed it would have would be a whopping 4 miles per hour, meaning there is no reason that can't be true. Pangea making all these places close also helps a lot.
- However, it would make it really funny that the brother of Jared decided to turn around and go back the second Etemenanki was built.
- As for where all the water went, it likely drained out the firmament.

Take a walk up to heaven.

- We know a lot more about the Tower Of Babel then you'd think. Despite some people saying it was a metaphor or parable, we know for a fact it was real because we found it, just like we found Noah's ark and wine press.
- Also known as the Etemenanki, it was a 66 meter tall temple and platform built to Marduk, a Babylonian God, before being demolished in 323 BCE.
- You can visit it's foundations to this day.
- The fact we know the height of it lets us do some funny stuff with Math.

- Anyone who tells you they found God is a liar because they haven't. An angel once told Esdras that only an idiot would try to understand how heaven works and find where it is, however I'm pleased to tell you that today, we figured it out.
- Etemenanki, was about 66meters tall, and we knew it was so far off from reaching heaven the angles laughed at it.
- As to be expected, the Jews love arguing over how high up Heaven is. Some say it takes 500 years to even reach the firmament, but that information is useless since the firmament is dead, and we don't even know what speed they would be going at.
- Since God's voice has come from heaven before, Heaven can't be in space or something because sound can't travel that, meaning heaven is below 10,000 km above sea level.
- A chariot goes at about 40 mph, and Elijha rode on to heaven that was on fire.

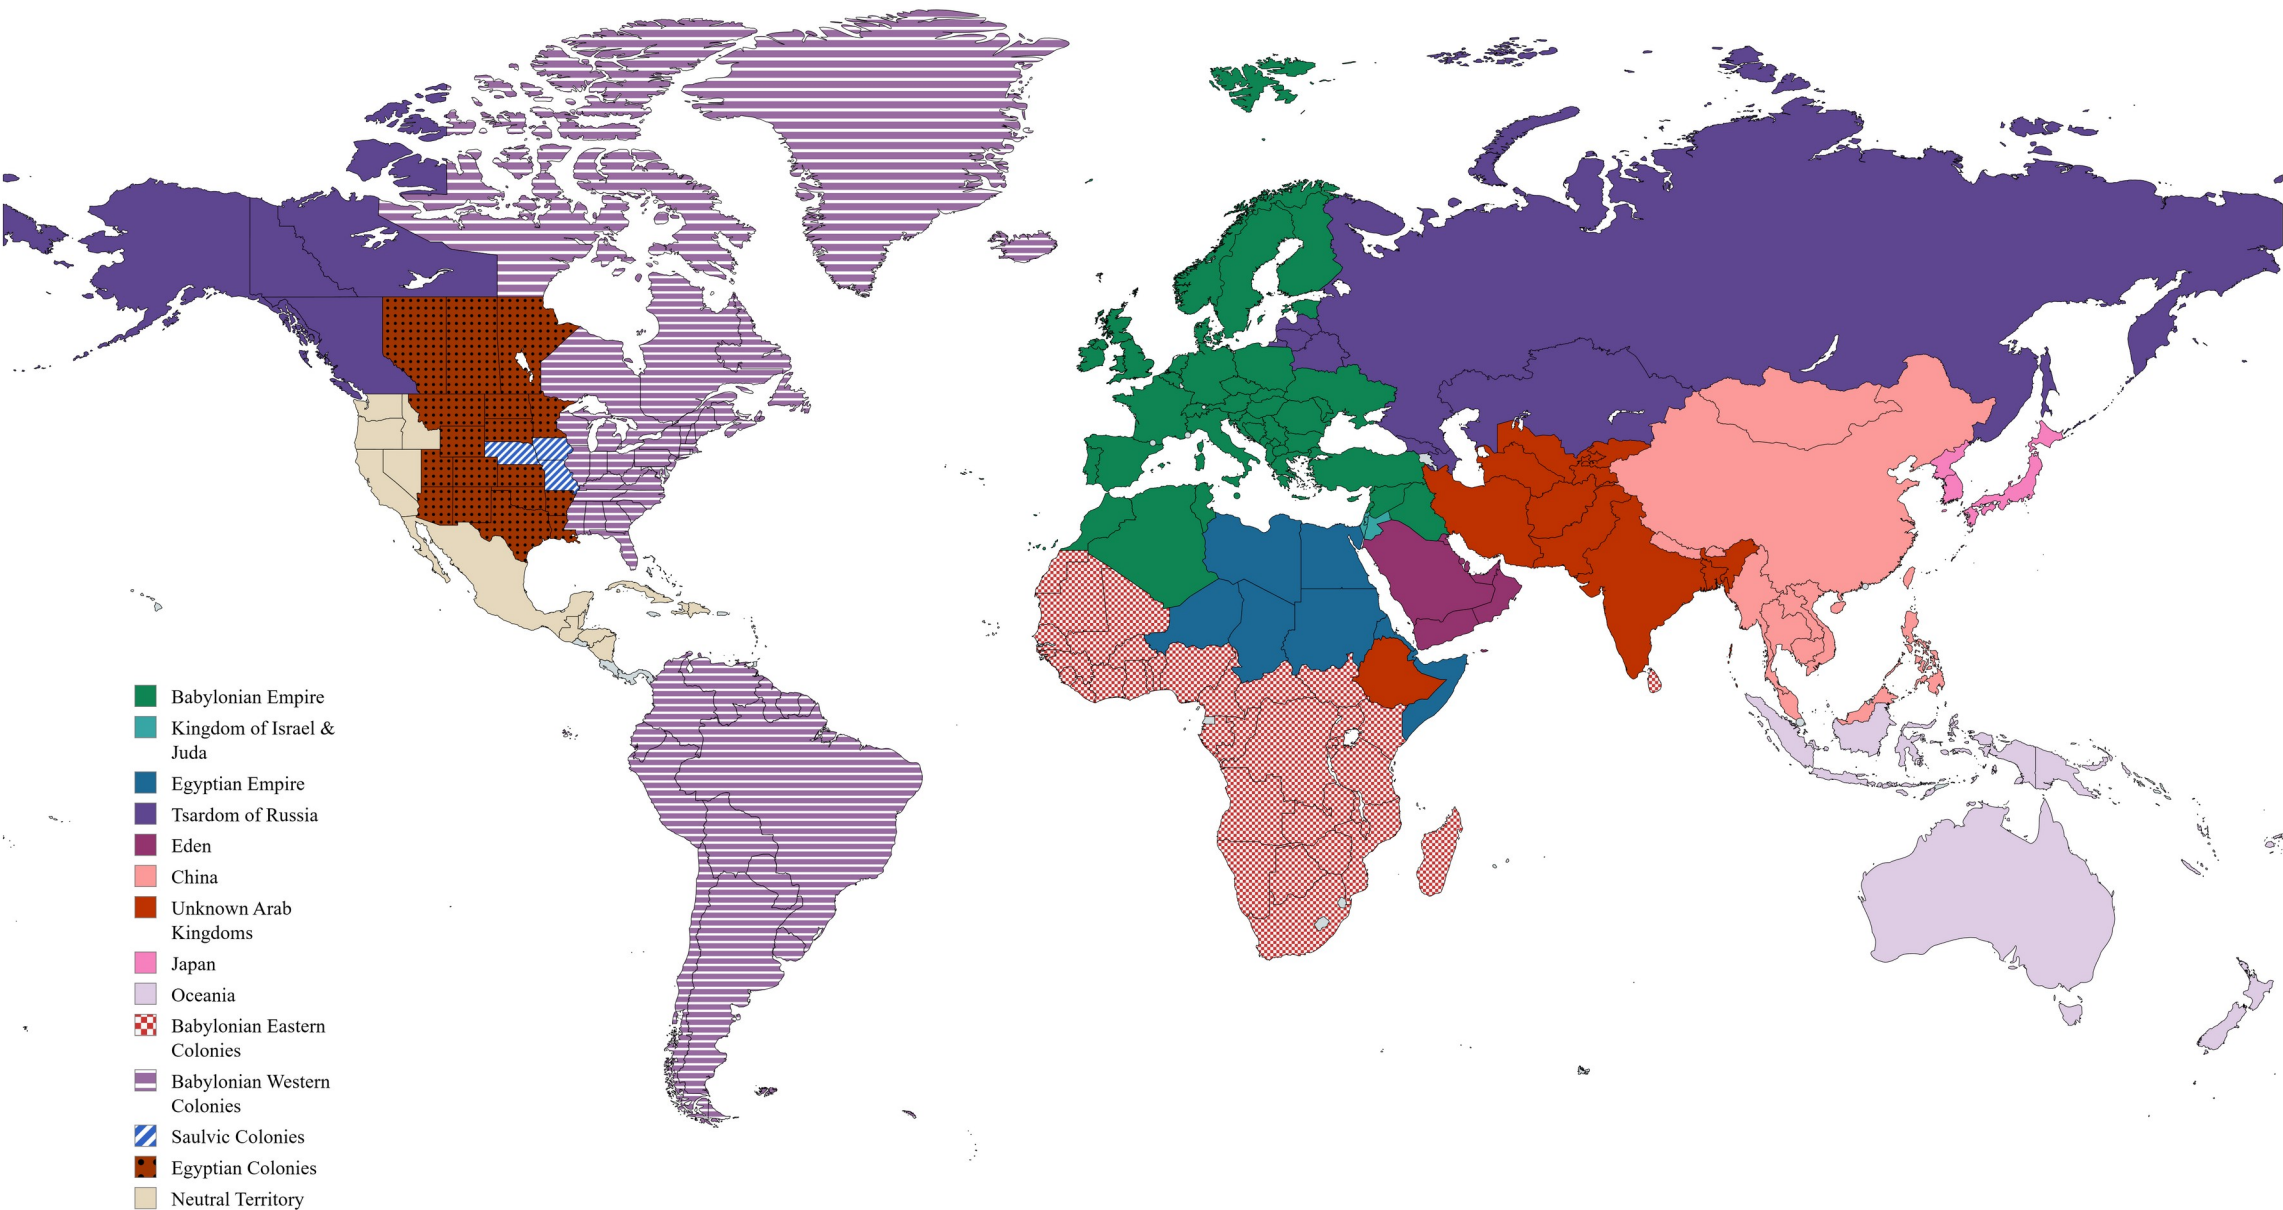

- This means the location of heaven, or L is all real numbers above 66meters yet below 10,000 km, where an object falling at a speed of 40 mph would burn as a result of a re-entry effect caused by the atmosphere.
- The only problem is to burn, the chariot would actually need to be going at Mach 5, but we can toss that up to gravity pulling it down faster. Afterall, it was on fire when it reached the ground, so it doesn't need to go over 40 mph for the trip back up to catch on double fire.
- Thankfully, the first vision tell us God's mouth is the same size as ours, so for us to hear his voice, he could be no more than 17 kilometers away at any given time, meaning the lowest point in the celestial kingdom can't be higher than 17 kilometers above sea level.
- All we need to do is invent some sort of thing to take up in the sky and start looking... wait... I wonder if that's what happened to MH-370 and Amelia Earhart... they crashed into a cherubim. Nuts.

Going back to David for just one moment.

- My David project was reviewed by a inactive member before I gave it, and his feedback was that I made it sound like Saul would have been better, and the more I think about it, the more funny it's gets.
- If David's grandson never becomes king, the kingdom never splits, meaning it never terns to sin and is destroyed by Babylon, and they never lose the ark or the temple.
- This means that by the time Rome shows up, Israel, Egypt, and Babylon just cream it, and Babylon becomes a world empire, and Christianity never exists because David's line disappearing means no Savior. This also means Nero wouldn't be able to blame Rome burning on the Christians.
- Islam has a high chance of never spreads west, but if it does, it would have a shot at becoming the state religion of Babylon.
- Rusha becomes massive because they have no America to have the cold war with, and Germany loses the both world wars in seconds assuming it's independent enough to start it. Japan and China just chose to not get involved in the west.
- This would be Joseph Smith and Joseph Stalin's Perfect victory.
- Unless, the Savior comes from Saul's line instead of David's. A Sauleed version of the New Testament would make sense considering a guy named Saul wrote hath of it. If that happens, then Christianity could end up the state religion of Babylon using the tried and true "we eat pork and drink wine in church" technique.
- Assuming things go well, this puts Babylon in the position to be the winner of the American Revolution, and allows the new Jerusalem to be built in Jacksoncounty, so the Mormons would win if they existed. Oh, and the statue of liberty would be Etemenanki 2.

In Tonight's Devotional,

- Abraham sacrifices his son on a mountain.
- Isaac gets trapped in a toxic marriage.
- Jacob punches the Lord in the face.
- And all of them season their food with Lot's wife.

GOODBYE
